As a parent you don't have it easy today.

Not only will many of you have to put up with your grown up offspring living in the family home well into their twenties (or even thirties...), some will be handing over a lump sum to get your children on a housing ladder that is increasingly out of reach.

And that's only if everything goes to plan. What would change if you were unable to work due to illness or injury? Your income would dry up and your savings, or "lump sum", wouldn't be far behind; where would your children's deposit dreams be then?

Thankfully, this doesn't have to be such a worry. Income protection will help replace lost income as a result of ill-health, so you won't have live in lodgers for longer than you want.
