

▶ Don't play snakes and ladders with your home

Getting on the housing ladder these days is hard enough.

After you've saved enough for what's likely to be a mammoth deposit, you've got to find the 'extras' – the legal costs, stamp duty and more.

But once the keys are in your hand you can relax, enjoy your new home and possibly start a bit of DIY. Right? Well, for some people this isn't the case, this is when the hard work starts and you have to hang onto the home you've worked so hard and saved so long for. If illness or injury strikes you could be struggling to pay for more than just a lick of paint – mortgage lenders don't take kindly to 'IOUs'.

Thankfully income protection can help. It will take away the worry of how to pay your bills if you're ill, leaving you to revel in your new space and plan for the future.
