There's no denying that we're a nation of animal lovers.

From Labradors to Labradoodles, our pets are part of the family and we look after them with love, care and affection.

But don't you find it strange that statistically we're more likely to insure our pets against ill health than ourselves? After all, if you lost your income as a result of illness or injury, you'd find it hard enough to feed your pets, let alone pay for their insurance premiums.

Income protection can help take this worry away. It can pay you a monthly benefit if you're too ill to work so you can concentrate on getting better, safe in the knowledge that Fido will get fed.
